Introduction

The following guidelines are created to give exact rules to the use of the Enervit Sport logo, in order to grant its coherence in every context. The logo together with its colour, proportions, background and name must be always kept as shown in these guidelines and not altered in any other way.

Every communication materials and non-specified situations must be previously approved by Enervit S.p.A.

If you have any questions or would like further information about use of the logo, contact
Massimo Caduto - Corporate Art Director:

The logo

The guidelines herein describe the use of this logo and the limitations to the ways in which it can be used in all main forms of communication on a brand level.

Please note that, despite the similarity with Corporate name and logo, the one on top is the logo of Enervit sport brand and products.

That Logo and the Corporate one below must never be confused or replaced one another.

Example

The logo

The Enervit Sport logo must always consist of the word “Enervit” and the “shield” with the arrow inscribed. These elements make up the logo as a whole and it is therefore strictly forbidden to use individual parts of it.

Example: It is never possible to use the shield individually.

Supporting sentence

If you wish to accompany communications in which the logo is present with a text, in order to reinforce the brand message, the sport line uses the wording:

This text can be used as headline or pay-off.

Examples

Print Advertisements

TV commercials

7

The “red rectangle”

The logo has been designed to always appear in white against a red rectangle.

The red rectangle, the logotype and the payoff have fixed proportions that must always be maintained.

The logotype, payoff and red rectangle have fixed proportions.

8

The red rectangle comes also in black

Only in cases where it is strictly necessary, although not recommended, to print black and white materials the red must be converted in black.
